Publishing with Nature Human Behaviour

Nature Human Behaviour publishes primary research of outstanding significance into any aspect of individual or collective human behaviour. We cover a broad range of social, biological, health and physical science disciplines. We also publish opinion pieces in our magazine section, where we aim to platform a diverse range of voices and make a positive impact in our community of readers. In this talk, I'll introduce the aims and scope of the journal, and I'll explain the process of submission and peer review with us for primary research articles.

Charlotte Payne

Charlotte leads the magazine section at Nature Human Behaviour, and she also handles primary research manuscripts in conservation, ecology, genetics, public health, metascience and anthropology. She has an interdisciplinary background spanning field- and lab-based research in anthropology, genetics, primatology, public health, nutrition and zoology.
